Bretford to Incorporate Technology for Education, Healthcare, Office and Retail Markets

NEW YORK - October 26, 2015 - Vringo, Inc. (NASDAQ: VRNG), a company engaged in the innovation, development and monetization of intellectual property as well as the commercialization and distribution of wire-free charging and rugged computing devices, today announced that its subsidiary, fliCharge, is extending and expanding its license agreement with Bretford Manufacturing.

In March 2014, Bretford entered into a license agreement to fliCharge's wire-free technology solutions. The terms of the agreement have been altered such that Bretford will have an exclusive license to embed fliCharge's wire-free charging solutions into furniture in markets including healthcare, commercial office, retail and educational facilities as well as contract furniture manufacturing. fliCharge intends to facilitate the launch by providing charging cases for phones and tablets to Bretford and its customers.

Bretford will be presenting the first commercially available implementation of this technology at NeoCon, North America's largest design exposition and conference focused on commercial interiors, in June of 2016.

"fliCharge's conductive wire-free technology addresses a major need of our education, healthcare, office and retail facilities customers - the need to easily and safely charge many devices without the clutter of cables and the difficulty of charging docks or stations. We intend to integrate this unique technology into our smart furniture and look forward to building upon our relationship with fliCharge and Vringo," said Chris Petrick, President and CEO of Bretford.

"We are delighted to have a partner like Bretford who is a leader in smart furniture," said Andrew Perlman, CEO of Vringo. "We look forward to commercial launches of our technology through this unique partnership in 2016," Mr. Perlman concluded.
